ZOOLOGY RECEIVES DEWEY SOPER'S FIELD DIARIES

This fall, Joseph Dewey Soper formally presented the field diaries and papers he has maintained during over half a century of fieldwork to the University's Department of Zoology. While the diaries and the various other papers and books he presented to Department will form an important addition to Zoology's collections, the presentation was only the latest event in a long and active career.

Discussions of Dr. Soper's life and work are inevitably marked by the respect and even the slight incredulity we reserve for the range and depth of accomplishment of pioneers. He is both an accomplished pianist and artist, as well as being a journeyman carpenter who built his own house from the ground up at sixty years of age. In the 1920s, his zoological expeditions in the Arctic even earned him the credential of an explorer. At a time when travel in the Arctic was by dog sled and not for one or two weeks followed by a quick flight home, but for a whole year, Dewey Soper surveyed Baffin Island by land, incidentally making significant corrections to maps of its

The field diaries that he kept during Zoological surveys that extended from Baffin Island to the 49th Parallel are invaluable.

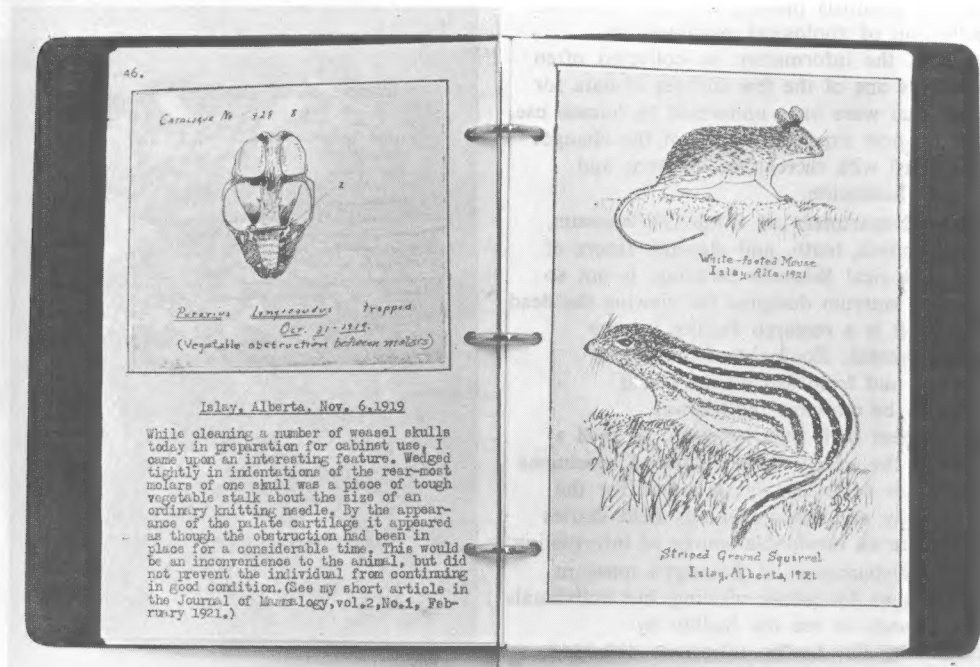

Although Dr. Soper's battered specimen box and his rudimentary mounting tools do not seem to be the paraphernalia of the modern scientist, they served him well for many, many years.

western coastline. As late as the beginning of this decade when he was approaching eighty years of age, Dr. Soper was still making ten-day long collecting trips into remote areas of Alberta.

Zoology, of course, has been Dewey Soper's major life interest. In the '20s, during his explorations and biological surveys in the Arctic, he discovered a new sub-species of ringed seal, and most notably, he was the discoverer of the breeding grounds of the Blue Goose near Bowen Bay on Baffin Island.

In the '30s, as a Wildlife Officer of the Dominion Government, Dr. Soper worked in Wood Buffalo Park, and the resulting monograph on bison is still considered an important contribution to scholarship on the bison. From 1934 to 1948 he served as Chief Wildlife Officer on the prairies, and from 1948 until his retirement in 1952, he was Chief Wildlife Officer for Alberta, the Northwest Territories, and the Yukon. After his retirement from the Canadian Wildlife Service he continued to make survey trips throughout Alberta, collecting specimens for the Department of Zoology and developing the background for his major work, The Mammals of Alberta. The Mammals of Alberta was published in 1964 and continues to be the authoritative book on the subject.

Colloquy

"Colloquy" is a column devoted to the free expression of opinions held by members of the University community. The criteria for the use of this space are simple. Submissions must be no longer than 1,000 words in length, and they must be typed and double spaced. Submissions must deal with issues that are of general interest to the University community, and they should be signed. While Folio is the official newsletter of the University of Alberta, the opinions expressed in "Colloquy" will not necessarily reflect University policy or the opinions of the Editor. Submissions should be sent to Colloquy, Office of Community Relations, 423 Athabasca Hall. Submissions will not be returned, and the Editor cannot guarantee publication.

THE SEXLESS-PRONOUN

I assume that the sexless-pronoun is still alive, and I would like to offer the following very modest proposal to settle it once and for all:

I propose that we make a slight semantic adjustment in the connotation of the sexless singular personal pronoun which has been doing its duty in the English language for centuries, namely "one." For example: "If a worker does One's job well, One should be rewarded." In present usage of course, "worker" is not necessarily the antecedent of "One," and the meaning of the sentence is ambiguous. But it seems to me that it would take only a little practice and experience for most English-speaking people to attune their ears to the new usage. The sentence certainly has a pleasant if not elegant sound, and within it "One" seems to blend more smoothly than some of the outlandish grunts I have seen proposed as substitutes for "he," "him," and "his."

As an aid in making the transition I further propose that the specific "One" be capitalized to distinguish it from the general "one." There are precedents for this device in the capital "I" for ordinary mortals and the capitalized masculine pronoun for the Deity. And speaking of the Deity, I am moved to propose parenthetically that "One" be henceforth substituted for the sexist "He" when referring to the Lord. I suspect that God Oneself would breathe a sigh of relief to be freed of the burden of listening to mortals arguing about whether One is male, female, or both. I am sure God would not object to sharing One's capitalized pronoun with us humans in the spirit of democracy and in the service of sexless English.

For a clincher, consider the following observation: As a pronoun "one" is underemployed and in danger of extinction. Because it is so rarely seen or heard in public, its use in the general sense often sounds stilted and is avoided by many English speakers and writers. I use it myself, rather sheepishly, about once a month. It lies there inert in Webster's, defined as "any individual of a vaguely indicated group . . . sometimes used as a third-person substitute for a pronoun of the first person." "Sometimes used" indeed! A substitute, a benchwarmer in the game of words. My proposal gives us the opportunity to pump new life into it, to give it a starting assignment on the first team, to get it back into action. Think of what happened to the lovely "thee" and its relatives. Where are they today, after serving the language well for hundreds of years? Dead, along with "avaunt" and "cubit" and the spelling bee. If we act now, we can save "one" from the same fate. "One's" time has arrived! The zeitgeist demands that it emerge from sloth and obscurity and bring sexual peace to the English language!

Robert Fischer
Student Counselling Services

Dr. Soper received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from this University in 1960 in recognition of his contributions to our knowledge of the natural history of Canada. Over eighty years of age, Dr. Soper's active participation in Zoology is now over. His contributions, however, will continue to be meaningful for many years to come.

His publications, field diaries, and in particular, the specimens he collected over the years, form an important part of Alberta's natural heritage. As he was one of the earliest scientists making detailed, systematic collection of zoological specimens in Alberta, the information he collected often serves as one of the few sources of data for areas that were once unharmed by human use, but are now experiencing all of the changes associated with recreation, industry, and human habitation.

The Department of Zoology's museum, on the ninth, tenth, and eleventh floors of the Biological Sciences Building, is not so much a museum designed for viewing the dead past as it is a research facility for the living present. Zoologists from across Canada and from around the world can use the museum's collections to augment their own research. In such a context the nearly three thousand specimens Dr. Soper collected and mounted for the University and his meticulous field diaries constitute an invaluable source of information.

The Department of Zoology's museum is not open for public viewing, but individuals can arrange to see the facility by contacting Dr. Lewin, telephone 432-3318, or Wayne Roberts, telephone 432-4622.

THE PREMIER'S AWARD FOR EXCELLENCE

■ Maurice Van Vliet (former Dean of the Faculty of Physical Education and Recreation) "Considered by many to be the 'dean of Canadian Physical Education' Dr. Van Vliet has been responsible for significant progress in this area of curriculum.

Beginning as Director of Physical Education at the University of Alberta in 1945, he immediately began to improve the content of courses, stressing those which would have carry over value in adult life. In the 1940s and 1950s he laid the groundwork for a degree in physical education, which culminated in the establishment of a school of physical education in 1954 and, in 1964, the first Faculty of Physical Education in Canada. In 1963 the Bachelor of Arts in Recreation Administration was established under Dr. Van Vliet's guidance and is recognized by other Canadian universities as the model to follow. In the area of post-graduate education he has been responsible for the founding of the first doctoral program in Physical Education in Canada.

Well known and highly respected in his field, Dr. Van Vliet has written four books and numerous professional articles on various aspects of physical education which are widely accepted as reference texts.

Actively involved in community affairs of astounding variety and number, he has been President or Chairman of the Alberta and Canadian Associations for Health, Physical Education and Recreation; the Alberta Recreation Association; the Alberta Physical Education Curriculum Committee; the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada; and the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Association. Deeply interested in sport for the disabled and handicapped, he has served with the Alberta Paraplegic Association and the Canadian Wheelchair Sports Association.

Accepting the demanding and challenging role of President of the XI Commonwealth Games Foundation in 1975, Dr. Van Vliet has carried out the many duties of this position with extraordinary success. Although he is quick to emphasize that the Foundation has depended largely upon the team effort of dedicated volunteers, it is ultimately the head of the organization that must shoulder the major responsibility for the coordination of the thousands of details necessary to the production of a festival of such magnitude. The 1978 Commonwealth Games were the most successful in history in terms of organization, efficiency, budget restraint, facility development, and volunteer effort.

Dr. Van Vliet's magnificent contribution to the realization of this success is the crowning achievement of a long and illustrious list of accomplishments which are of immeasurable benefit to all citizens of Alberta, Canada and the entire world."

MacEACHRAN ROOM ESTABLISHED

The University Collections Centre and the Department of Psychology have recently completed a project to exhibit a number of pieces of fine and decorative art from the J.M. MacEachran Collection in P-229A of the Biological Sciences Building. This room, which will be used by the Psychology department for special guests and graduate student oral examinations, houses a portrait of Dr. MacEachran by J.B. Taylor, a number of items of antique furniture, and smaller decorative pieces such as brass vases, a Chinese bowl, and English china, pewter, and silver in a setting reminiscent of Dr. MacEachran's home.

Dr. MacEachran joined the University of Alberta in 1909. He headed the Department of Philosophy and later became the first Provost of the University. He retired in 1945. Upon his death in 1971, at the age of ninety-four, he bequeathed a large number of items to the University, including those displayed in P-229A.

The Department of Psychology, cognizant of the great contributions made by Dr. MacEachran, has set aside the MacEachran Room, unique on campus, to honor him.
